

I Who Change the World

Gagan R. Maileshwar

It's change that is strange,
Which can alter the world's range.
It's by me that starts,

Because,

In the flock of sheep,
It's enough if one sheep
Realize the pit in the way.
For others to get out of sway.

In the row of matchsticks which are about to burn,
It's all about one between,
Which can change the scene,
That makes them stay on the screen.

In the group of people,
It's all about initiatives of individuals,
Who can protect others from being miserable:
By the effect of this pandemic which itself is resistible.

In the group of many females,
It was one Malala,
Who went over and made many women empowered,
Which forged the world superpower.

Stop thinking about what you got from the world,
And start working on what you must do for the world!
